A Samba Parade (Sambadrome) in Rio de Janeiro – Sambodrome has been the focus of Carnival celebrations in Brazil.
This is a quarterly publication by the Embassy of Brazil in Nairobi which aims to create awareness of existing trade and investment opportunities between Brazil and Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda, Somalia and Burundi. This second quarter edition for 2017 sheds light on the Brazilian tourism sector, we also introduce the Brazilian Energy sector with a view on power generation in Brazil and the existing legal frameworks that aid in investing in the sector, an initiative that aims to stimulate the export of Brazilian products. In addition, there is a short article on São Paulo City, the Brazilian Alpha Global City that is the largest Portuguese speaking city in the world and the capital of the state of Sao Paulo, Brazil's wealthiest state.

The Department of Trade and Investment Promotion (DPR) is the unit of the Ministry of External Relations (MRE) responsible for developing and implementing Brazilian exports, foreign investment promotion policies and dissemination of national tourism products. In working with other organizations of the Federal Public Administration, DPR is responsible for matching up Brazilian exports to external demand and stimulating foreign investments. DPR also participates in the discussion and development of proposals for government policies to facilitate the entry and operations of Brazilian companies in external markets, with a view to transforming business opportunities into effective benefits for the country.

Through the extensive knowledge and experience of its staff in the field of international trade diplomacy, the department also organizes events to create awareness and promote technological capacities abroad. To this end, it works in close partnership with representative entities of the private sector and companies engaged in the external market. The DPR operates five specialized units in Brasilia: Investment Division (DINV), Trade Intelligence Division (DIC), Trade Promotion Operations Division (DOC), Trade Promotion Programs Division (DPG), and Information Technology and Communication Centre (CTIC). DPR is responsible for over 100 Trade Promotion Sections (SECOMs) in over 78 countries operating in strategic posts in five continents located in 102 embassies and consulates around the world. SECOMs provide assistance to companies wishing to invest in Brazil or import Brazilian products and services. They are also responsible for gathering and disseminating information about local business and investment opportunities for Brazilian companies.
The Invest & Export Brazil (www.investexportbrasil.gov.br) website is a unique initiative of the Federal Government of Brazil, which brings together, on a single platform, information from various Brazilian agencies dedicated to trade promotion and investment attraction.

Invest & Export Brazil is an efficient, coordinated government website highlighting Brazil's business and investment opportunities, promoting foreign trade and attracting international investors to the country's dynamic domestic economy. This informative website is a joint effort of Brazil's Ministries of External Relations (MRE), Development, Industry and Foreign Trade (MDIC), Agriculture, Livestock and Food Supply (MAPA) and the Brazilian Trade and Investment Promotion Agency (APEX-Brasil).

The platform brings together information on investment and business opportunities, presenting, in a structured and thematic manner, Brazil's major industries and the institutions supporting them. The Trade and Investment Guide follows the international trend towards cooperating organizations sharing products and services in a single, standardized electronic environment. The innovative web interface enhances the user experience, optimizing access to information, quickly answering key questions and offering services that simplify import, export and investment activities.

Global Competitiveness

The World Economic Forum, Travel and Tourism Competitiveness Reports 2015 ranked Brazil the 1st in Latin American Tourism, 1st place in natural resources, and 3rd place in domestic commercial flight market in the world. These were attributed to the nation's drive to protect its natural resources, its diverse culture and the influx of visitors after the World Cup 2014. The Ministry of Tourism of Brazil has invested significant resources to improve the touristic infrastructure in the country.

Due to its global competitiveness and positioning, Brazil successfully managed to host the Olympics in 2016 and the World Cup in 2014. These were attributed to the country's sporting culture, which is itself a reason for visitor inflows to the country. Future developments have also been based on these events, spurring interest in investing in the Brazilian Travel and Tourism. Immediately after the events, Jun Yamamoto, the Director of Planning & Strategic Management at the Ministry of Tourism said Brazil can expect a six per cent increase in the number of visitors to the country over the next year. This was based on findings taken from the three previous Olympic host cities (Athens, Beijing and London). Also, according to a survey by the Ministry of Tourism, 87.7% of foreign tourists intended to come back to Brazil after the events.
Tourist Cities and States in Brazil

According to the Brazilian Tourism Board (Embratur), various locations in Brazil offer perfect tourist destinations. Recife, the capital city of the state of Pernambuco, is a city with multicultural roots, where dancing, music, arts and cuisine delight all with its originality and tradition, alongside beautiful beaches and a number of options for hotels, restaurants and bars. Its main events venue is the Convention Center of Pernambuco (Centro de Convenções de Pernambuco).

Fortaleza is a destination that stands out for a wide variety of tourist attractions, such as an exuberant coastline, rich history, typical cuisine, cultural events and numerous entertainment options. In geographical terms, it is among the Brazilian locations closest to Europe and North America.

Porto Alegre is the capital city of the state of Rio Grande do Sul. It offers extensive options for cultural, historical and ecological attractions, in addition to its cuisine, which is known for its quality and variety. Porto Alegre's Salgado Filho International Airport is the main airport in Brazil's Southern region. The city has a diversified hotel network and ideal venues for events, from congresses to conventions.

Florianópolis, the capital of Santa Catarina is known for its natural attractions and for its events infrastructure. The city is one of the most important events tourism destinations in the country, which places it among the 10 Brazilian cities that promote the largest number of international events, according to the ICCA (International Congress and Convention Association).

Natal, the capital city of the state of Rio Grande do Norte, is considered one of the best tourist destinations in Brazil's Northeast region, according to foreign tourists. This is due to its natural beauty, beautiful beaches, the rich local culture and the quality of its tourism infrastructure. Natal is considered by NASA “the city with the cleanest air in the Americas”.

Foz do Iguaçu is known for its natural beauty and for having one of the most beautiful ecological reserves on Earth – the Iguassu National Park, a Unesco World Heritage Site. The park is home to the breathtaking Iguassu Falls, the Eighth Wonder of the World, and the Itaipu Hydroelectric Plant, one of the largest in the world and one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World.

Rio de Janeiro is one of the world's most popular postcards, with beaches and famous sights, such as the sugar loaf (Pão de Açúcar) and the statue of Christ the Redeemer (Cristo Redentor), elected one of the New Seven Wonders of the World. It is a consolidated events destination, according to the ICCA (International Congress and Convention Association).

Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais, stands out for its mining activities and the marketing of jewelry and precious stones. It is the third largest metropolitan area in the country and one of the most important economic and industrial centers of Brazil. The town is less than an hour's flight from Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo and Brasilia, and offers excellent convention centers, hotel chains and road networks.

Salvador, the capital city of the state of Bahia, is a city of great cultural wealth, based on religious syncretism, preserved in museums and churches, especially in its Historical Center and the Pillory (Pelourinho). In addition, its cuisine, as well as the joy and hospitality of its people are outstanding aspects for those who visit Salvador. It has a diversified and modern hotel network, with a wide variety of hotels, flats, inns and resorts.

Manaus, the capital city of the state of Amazonas, is considered the consumer electronics capital of Latin America and is the largest manufacturer of motorcycles in the country, with approximately 500 companies that employ more than 400 thousand people. It has a modern airport and conventions infrastructure, which is available for events, and offers a varied hotel network, with jungle hotels, resorts and lodges.

From its upper side, tourists see a panoramic view of the Baía de Todos os Santos, Mercado Modelo and a considerable part of the city of Salvador.
São Paulo was founded in 1554, after being the main highway to interior cities of the country being the route of the founders (bandeirantes), the State was made a gateway to the sertão (Brazil's backcountry). It has influence from Portuguese, Spanish, German, African, Jewish, Arab and Japanese decent as a result of the settlers from these origins. It is on a plateau (Piratininga plateau) and is surrounded by two rivers. The State is one of the engines of the Brazilian economy with over 42 million inhabitants. Concentrating one third of Brazil’s GDP, the state is responsible for more than half the exports of manufactured goods and ranks as the largest industrial, commercial and financial hub of South America.

With a population of close to 45 million people, the state alone generates a nominal per capita income of USD 551 with an annual gross output of close to USD 25billion attributed to active productive sectors. Agro industry in the State of São Paulo alone exported US$ 15.88 billion in 2015, the equivalent of 18% of the entire sales volume of Brazil's agribusiness to foreign countries, according to data of the Economic Agriculture Institute (“IEA” – Instituto de Economia Agrícola). The major contributions to such results came from sugarcane and saccharides (US$ 9.27 billion), bovines (US$ 2.64 billion), forestry products (US$ 2.08 billion), cereals and grains (US$ 1.53 billion). The importance of the State of São Paulo in the country's agribusiness is also attested by the high participation of the sugarcane, beef and fruit complexes in the national production. Sugarcane is the main value-generating activity in the State's regions, which account for more than 60% of the national production of ethanol, while also concentrating 95% of Brazil's orange juice production exports, and representing 13% of the country's cattle slaughter. Industrial items of manufactured and semi-manufactured goods also accounted for exports worth US$ 11.18 billion

The City of São Paulo is the biggest financial center in Brazil and is one of the biggest financial centers in the world, hosting BM&F BOVESPA, with one of the biggest Market Capitalization in the world. Being once a city with a very strong Industrial character, there have been increasing developments in other sectors, key of them being the Tertiary Services sector. There are a large number of corporations both local and foreign in the City which give it an unique character. It is also the business center of the Mercosur economy (The Sub - Economic Bloc that comprises Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela).

Being a city of business tourism, it attracts some of the biggest and most important international events, mainly in economic, cultural, sporting and scientific areas. Due to its vast real estate development, it hosts some of the world's biggest events as a result of expansive investments in hotels and conference centres. According to the International Congress and Convention Association (ICCA), São Paulo is the most important destination for international events in the Americas. The city is also among Top 20 destinations for events in the world and has so far left behind destinations like Madrid, Sydney, Athens and Vancouver.

The Octavio Frias de Oliveira Bridge is a cable-stayed bridge in São Paulo, Brazil over the Pinheiros River, opened in May 2008. The bridge is 138 metres (453 ft) tall, and connects Marginal Pinheiros to Jornalista Roberto Marinho Avenue in the south area of the city. It is named after Octavio Frias de Oliveira, Brazilian journalist and businessman.

BRAZIL'S POWER SECTOR

Owing to its diverse natural resources, which include deep water resources developments and a rapidly growing economy, Brazil is ranked among the biggest global energy producers. According to Brazil Ministry of Energy, in 2016 Hydro Power and Oil were the main sources of Brazilian energy, producing 46.6% of the country's energy. Other sources of energy are Natural Gas, Mineral coal and Biofuel used at the larger scale; while wind and nuclear power are used at a lower scale.

Policy and Regulations in the power sector

The government agency responsible for the overall policy setting in the country is the Ministry of Energy and Mines (MME) and it is linked with ANEEL (The Energy Regulatory Agency), which was created in 1996, under the Law 9427. ANEEL regulates and controls the generation, transmission and distribution of power, in compliance with the existing legislation. In the Ministry of Energy and Mines, the National Council for Energy Policies (CNPE) is an advisor and is in charge of approving supply criteria and "structural" projects. The Electricity Industry Monitoring Committee (CMSE) monitors supply continuity and security of the power systems.
ANEEL also approves and supervises the activities of the Power Commercialization Chamber (CCEE), tasked with the role of operating in the commercial markets. Its initial role was to create a single, integrated commercial electricity market that is regulated under existing rules.

Research and Development is key for the inputs and for the planning and implementation of actions by the Ministry of Energy and Mines in the formulation of the energy policy. The Power and Research Company (EPE) was created in 2004 and develops plans for the power sector. It undertakes studies and research activities in the energy sector in areas such as oil, coal, renewable energy and natural gas and its derivates, energy efficiency and resources, among others.

Some of the legal frameworks for an investor willing to invest in this sector include but are not limited to restrictions on acquisition of rural properties by Brazilian companies controlled by foreigners, environmental licenses, and compliance with labor legislation.

Electric Power Generation, Transmission and Distribution

Most of the power is generated from the Itaipu Dam with state companies, mainly CESP, Cemig and Copel, controlling 8%, 7% and 5% of generation capacity respectively. Brazilian power generation is largely dominated by government-controlled companies and about 27% of the generation assets are owned by private investors and is anticipated to hit 31% in the medium term 44% over 5–6 years. Private sector participation in the generation business is likely to represent 50% of the installed capacity in future. There are also auctions to be organized by state-owned companies to sell existing generation plants in the States of Paraná, São Paulo, Santa Catarina and Minas Gerais, such as power plants Jaguara, São Roque, Miranda and São Simão.

The current installed capacity of Brazilian power system is of 160GW, and by 2024 the Government expects an increase of 46,447MW, part of which is already contracted and under implementation. On transmission lines there is also an expected development up to 2024 by an increment of 85,782km of new lines.

The new government in Brazil is focused on revamping the power sector, presenting good investment opportunities. A new team to revamp the sector composed of well-known professionals gives a strong indication of a more investment friendly regulatory network and reforms that are meant to spur growth in the country's foreign investments and return the economy to its previous state, which should lead to an increase in the demand for power. The envisaged increase in demand will be accompanied by an increase in installed capacity, provided by the expansion of solar, wind, biomass and even nuclear sources, with Hydro being the main source of power. The overdependence of power systems on Hydropower is also planned to be reduced to 60% of all sources by the year 2030 with increase on solar energy to represent 3% of total installed capacity; wind increasing to 12%; and biomass to 9%, by 2024.
Adequate transmission is important in order to manage consistencies in the power sector, minimizing unexpected hitches such as regional droughts, allowing the transmission of power from regions with plenty rainfall. For example, the rationing that occurred in 2001-2002 could have been averted if there had been adequate transmission capacity between the South, with excess supply, and the South East, which had a very huge deficit of power production. Power Transmission in Brazil is almost exclusively under government control through both federal (Eletrobras) and state companies (mainly Sao-Paulo-CTEEP, Minas Gerais-Cemig, and Parana-Copel).
